CRAGO, SNYDER, HOPWOOD TALK

Republicans Enthusiastic Over Demonstrations at County Seat On Saturday Night; Turnout Exceeds Expectations; Chairman Crow Present

Addressing the largest audience which has attended a political meeting in the present campaign and which followed one of the greatest political parades ever held in the county seat, former Secretary of State Philander C. Knox on Saturday night, demonstrated the Administration in hauling down the American flag over the Panama Canal, thereby breaking its solemn platform pledge of 1912, the former Secretary of State treated the audience to a political address in the possession of the act under which the Canal was built, and as Secretary of State he formulated the doctrine of free trade for American coastwise vessels; a doctrine endorsed by the three major political parties in the 1912 campaign and then reversed on the campaign of President Woodrow Wilson by a pliant Congress. Mr. Knox, a native of Fayette county, attacked both the eight-hour and the child labor laws as a pair of Gold Brick laws passed on the eve of a presidential election for the sole purpose of attracting votes in his first political speech in his native county.

In addition to the address of Senator Knox, comparatively brief speeches were made by Colonel Thomas S. Crago of Waynesburg, candidate for Judge at Large; Charles A. Snyder of Schuylkill county, candidate for Auditor General, and Robert P. Hopwood, who seeks re-election to Congress from the Twenty-third district.

State Chairman W. E. Crow presided over the meeting and Harmon M. Keppart of Connelville, candidate for State Treasurer occupied a seat on the platform, which was filled by representative Republicans from all over the county.

The parade was a big affair. Every section of the county sent delegations; one about, some on horseback, others on motorcycles and scores in automobiles. There were bands and red fire. It reminded one, as State Chairman Crow remarked in the meeting later, of the old-fashioned torchlight processions, so popular in the county a good many years ago.

The parade was larger than had been anticipated in starting, with the consequence that it was 9 o'clock before Senator Knox began his speech in the West End Theatre. The theatre was well filled. Every seat on the lower floor was taken, and the balcony was comfortably filled. Several women occupied the boxes. The audience was of a character of those found all over the state, quiet, orderly and displaying a sincere interest in what the speakers had to say. The people were interested in the issues this year. There is less enthusiasm over foreign wars than in the commensurate alike which have been so general this year. They want to know facts, and the Republican speakers are giving them what they want about sugar coating.

State Chairman W. E. Crow formally opened the meeting about 8 o'clock. He expressed pleasure at the reception which had been accorded the Republican candidates in all sections of the state. He congratulated the Fayette county committee on the success of its demonstration, stating that it reminded him of the days of the old torchlight processions. He declared that he people who are attending the political meetings this year are serious minded; persons anxious to hear the issues discussed by capable speakers, with a view to making up their minds how to cast their vote this year. He predicted that Fayette county would be in line with the other counties of Pennsylvania in returning a big majority for the Republican party. "Every man on the ticket," Senator Crow declared, "is worthy of the suffrage and full support of every Republican."

He introduced former Secretary of State Knox who said in part:

hostilities which are warring civilization, but serious minded persons appreciate the dire disaster which threatens us in the present and is more likely to do so in the future.

At this critical period we are called upon to select in chief executive to guide the affairs of this nation. Not only is it our right, but it is our duty—and when I say our duty I do not mean a collective duty, but an individual duty—to look carefully into the record, the character, the attributes and the ability of those seeking your franchise.

The Republican party offers a candidate whose record is as open as a book. This man first won his claim to public approval by an investigation of the great life insurance companies of this country, weeding out evils and setting those great institutions on a more stable basis. His next claim was a governor of New York, where particularly with regard to the rights of the plain people especially the laboring man, he made a record unequalled by any other governor of any state in a given length of time. He was next a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, whose functions and jurisdiction are not paralleled by anybody that ever existed. He was then bidden to become a candidate for President of the United States.

Then you super add to this high character the square jawed Americanism, the clean, decent, God-fearing life of Charles Evans Hughes.

Upon the other hand one is seeking your approval whose record in conducting a very few years, and whose record is offered for your inspection because on that record he seeks a vote of confidence.

This makes it not only the right, but the duty of every American citizen to examine, with fairness, with justice, with honesty, this record with a view not of satisfying personal ambition to be confined in office, but with a view to determine what will be the greatest good for the greatest number.

It is perfectly fair and proper to put this up to you. By men's deeds shall you know them. The confidence placed in a man depends largely in the faith he has kept with you in the past. It is for you to say how well he has kept that faith.

I do not intend to go into details of those broken pledges and the shattered hopes of our people. I shall refer to one or two things I think of vital consequence as bearing upon ourselves and our institutions.

There is one thing of which the American people are justly proud. It is the construction of the Panama Canal. It was dreamed of from the days that Christopher Columbus first cast his eye upon this hemisphere. It was projected as long as 400 years ago. After centuries of discussion, one of the most skilled and capable nations of the world attempted it and failed.

In 1902 the Congress of the United States passed an act providing for the construction of the canal. I am talking of something that is for at that time was Attorney General of the United States and one provision of that act was to advise the President whether we could take a good and sufficient title to the property. I visited France, examined the records of the old company, and after careful investigation, advised this government that it could take such title. Later I carried out those negotiations by which the Republic of Panama was paid $10,000,000 in cash and given $250,000 a year forever, and the French company paid $40,000,000. We sent down the flower of American youth, and through the aid of American science, conquered the all of American science, conquered the canal and built that canal at a cost of $40,000,000.

About the time the canal was finished the nations of the world demanded that they enjoy equal rights in its use and we conceded it. We agreed that all the ships of all the nations of the world might pass through that canal on equal terms. But in reply to Great Britain, we announced that we would charge the same toll on United States ships, except as to our own coastwise vessels, a trade in which no foreign vessel was allowed to engage. We agreed on what terms we saw fit. It was my pleasure and my duty to induce a note to be sent to America with the declaration that the canal was to be open to all.

Now the State Department has taken the position in following that the canal was built for the use of the United States alone. The Republican party at Chicago in 1912 wrote in its platform that the canal was to be open to all. The Progressive party adopted a similar position. It is so seldom that the Democratic party does it in their platform. President Wilson, who is the candidate for President, told the American people, the farmer, the workman, the merchant, the banker, that this was a necessary protection to our commerce. He declared, too, that Democratic pledges were made to be kept, and he advocated that plan.

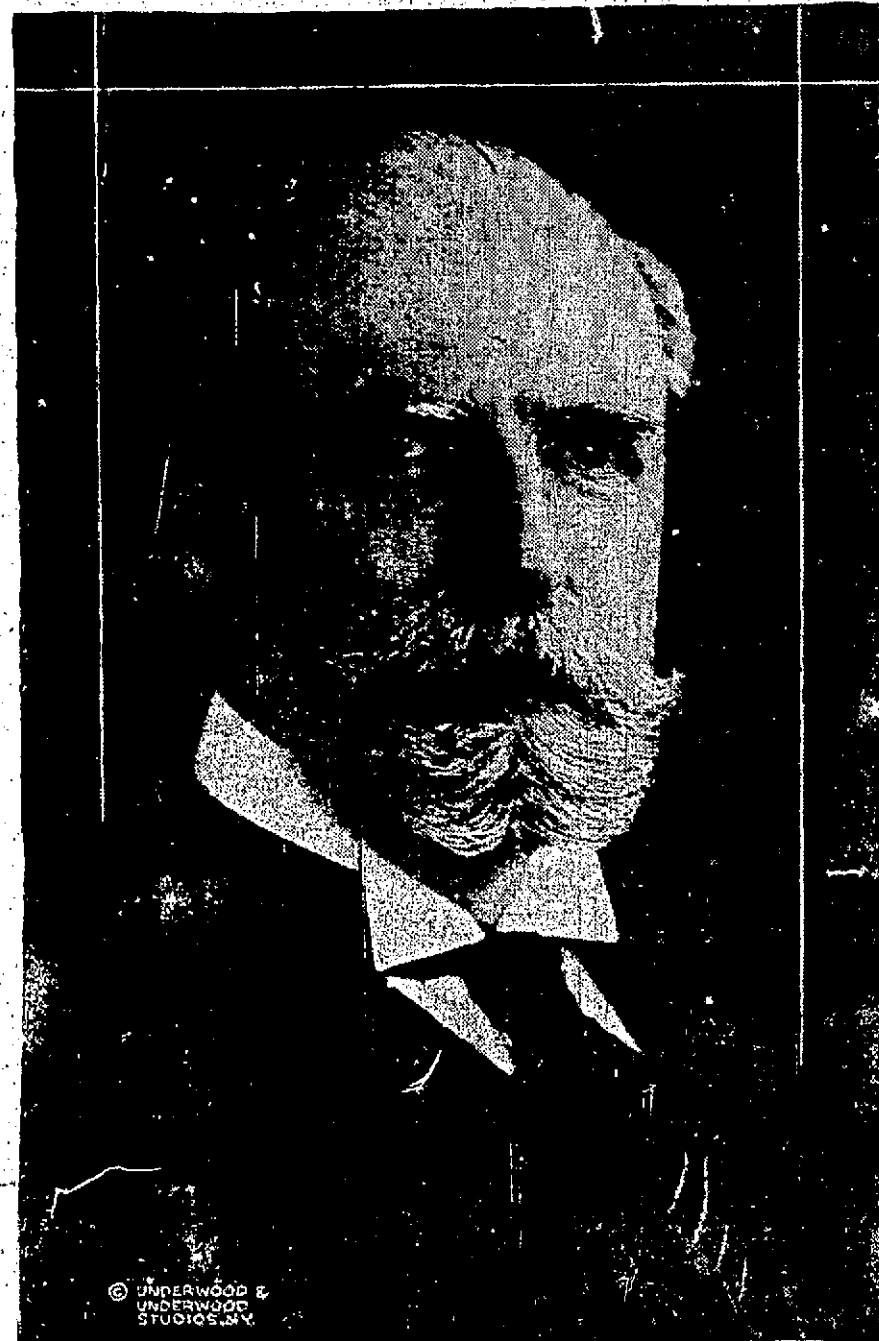

Within 10 days after his inauguration as President of the United States without previous from Great Britain, or any other foreign power, Mr. Wilson went before Congress and asked unanimous support in broadening that plan. He demanded that the right of the free toll measure be put through that day, notwithstanding the cost, the sacrifice, the responsibility for carrying and defending that great project. Now the American flag does not, nor the sovereignty of the United States, but only over the office of the paymaster and the policeman.

Ask you if these pledges and promises given to the American people are to be carried out in such hands?

I will discuss the Admiration bill, the so-called eight-hour law, and the child labor law. I shall undertake to convince you that in passing this legislation the Democratic party sold you a pair of Gold Brick Tins.

I am not opposed to labor organizations. I was only in contact with the brotherhood once, and that was when they sought me, as Attorney General.

MY CONCEPTION OF THE PRESIDENCY
BY CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

Charles Evans Hughes, in one of the most comprehensive statements ever issued by a candidate for office, gives to the American people his conception of the Presidency.

"No man is more determined than I to maintain the peace which the United States, Spain, Sweden, Norway and all the American republics now enjoy. But I should seek to maintain that peace by a firm and courteous insistence on the rights of our citizens at home and abroad.

"There confronts labor in the next four years a condition more serious than any that American laboring men have been called upon to face. When this war began over a million American working men were seeking vainly for employment. When the war ends and the developed energies of a new Europe are thrown into commercial production, our nation will face a competition such as it never knew. One of two things must happen: either millions of men will be seeking work in vain or else there must be thought out in advance the problem of commercial organization, as France and England and Germany are seeking to think out the problem. Every one of these nations is preparing to defend its own markets by a protective tariff. The end of the war will create also the opportunities for labor created by the war. The millions in the trenches today will be our industrial competitors tomorrow. If we are to save our laboring men from a catastrophe we must plan a tariff protection, along sound, just and economic lines. To this endeavor I pledge myself and the men who are to be my colleagues.

"In this matter, again, I differ absolutely from the policy of the present administration. Democratic platforms have declared that the government had no right to levy tariff duties except for income. This is the fundamental faith of the Democratic party.

"I pledge myself and those who stand with me to deal with the needs of laboring men the country over, whatever their trade or organization, upon the principle of giving the largest protection possible to every American working man and the largest participation possible in the prosperity of our industries with special efforts to wage.

"Finally, it is to be remembered that every European government is putting itself behind its industries, organizing them, encouraging them and suggesting economies. When the commercial struggle begins anew, the industries of every European country will go into the world markets backed by the effective co-operation and intelligent oversight of their government.

"Our national policy requires that government maintain a strict supervision of business organization. This can be done effectively and yet leave the government free to encourage legitimate and wholesome business enterprise.

"You know the road we have traveled this last four years. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Daniels are monuments to executive inefficiency. Our misdeeds and foreign affairs in Mexico reveal a conception of American citizenship plain enough to see but a new one for American patriotism to adopt: the movement of class bitterness raised by this administration throws a sinister shadow across our political horizon; the unjust accusation against business men has left a bitter taste in our national life. If you prefer this path it is plainly marked. And the end of it is class war.

"You ask what road I propose to travel? These are the milestones which mark it—an executive responsible to the whole nation; a cabinet chosen from the ablest Americans; a foreign policy that stands courageously but firmly for American rights; a flag that protects the American in his lawful rights wherever his legitimate business may take him; a preparation for trade competition which shall protect all groups of American workmen; a government oversight of business which will fairly eliminate abuses; but will act on the assumption that the average business man is honest and finally a domestic policy which looks to industrial peace, and to sound and permanent prosperity based upon the development of American trade and the building up of American industries.

"We Americans are in one boat. You cannot strike the life of one group without injury to all. Common

Only Seven States, With Total of 50 Votes, Regarded as Doubtful Allots Wilson 140 Votes as Certain, All of Them in the South.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Four years ago Colonel George Harvey guessed wrong as to only one state in his election forecast. In 1908 he was only 17 electoral votes out of the way, and in 1904 only 22. In April of the present year, before a single state had indicated a preference for the nominee, he closed an analysis of the political situation, under the heading, "Nobody for Hughes but the People," with the positive prediction that "rightly or wrongly, wisely or not, the Will of the People will prevail and Charles Evans Hughes will be the next Republican candidate for President of the United States." In the North American Review, to be published today, Colonel Harvey predicts the election of Hughes as certain, in detail as follows:

FIRE AT RAINEYTOWN

Store of W. J. Rainey There is Almost Totally Destroyed.

Fire of mysterious origin broke out in the W. J. Rainey store at Raineytown, near Dawson, about 1.30 o'clock Sunday morning and though the Dawson fire department, though hard to check the flames, the building was practically destroyed and the stock consumed or ruined by smoke and water. The loss may reach $12,000, it was said, covered partly by insurance.

A large sum of money, representing the receipts of Saturday's business, was destroyed in the fire. The stock was a total loss. The stock and equipment lost are estimated at between $5,000 and $7,000 while the building was held at $5,000.

Ralph Ellenberger, an employe of the store, was asleep on the second floor when the fire broke out. He was awakened by the smoke and immediately gave the alarm. The building was a mass of flames by the time the Dawson firemen arrived. The place is thought to have originated somewhere on the second floor.

A. G. Leonard, the manager, says that he will handle the latest styles in house furniture, all of his stock being new and thoroughly up-to-date. Mr. Leonard has had 20 years experience in this business, having been born and reared in this line of endeavor. His father and grandfather were furniture manufacturers but he has been engaged in the selling end of the business. WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Dandurite at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.—Adv.

CHILD'S TONGUE BECOMES COATED IF CONSTIPATED

When Croup, Feverish and Sick Give California Syrup of Figs.

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with wastes, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Adv.

CHURCHES REDEDICATED

Large Attendance at Trinity Reformed Services; Former Pastor Here.

The largest congregations in the history of Trinity Reformed Church attended the rededication services yesterday morning and afternoon. A ne Sunday school balcony which increases the seating capacity to nearly 100 was consecrated to the service of the Lord in fitting manner.

Dr. A. J. Heller of Greensburg, who organized the congregation and was its first pastor, assisted in the services. The sermons at both services were preached by Rev. J. M. Mulla of Baltimore, superintendent of home missions for the East Potomac area, and Rev. W. J. Mui of Scottsdale also took part. The dedicatory ritual was in charge of the pastor, Rev. C. E. Wagner. Holy communion was celebrated morning and evening.

No offering to cover the expense of the improvements was taken, the item being taken care of in the regular yearly budget.

The rededication of St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Slovak Church here was celebrated yesterday. Practically all members of the church numbering about 250, and coming from all parts of the cokes region, were present. Donations amounted to $25.

Rev. Dr. Kvacals of Johnstown was the speaker of the day. Rev. Marit Tomaska, pastor of the church.

DOCTOR PRESCRIBED VINOL

To Restore Strength To This Weak, Nervous Woman.

Many fair-minded doctors prescribe Vinol because they know of what it is made, viz.—beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptones, and glycerophosphates, with a mild tonic wine. They know there are the oldest and most famous tonics. Read the result in Mrs. Mason's case. "I keep house for my little family of two, and got into a weak, nervous, run-down condition. I was tired and weak and did not know what ailed me. My doctor prescribed Vinol. I finished an improvement before I had finished the first bottle, and I am now feeling fine and doing all my housework." Mrs. M. S. Mason, 203 Passaic St., Trenton, N. J.

Every weak, nervous, run-down person, feeble old people and delicate child in Connellsville should try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it fails to benefit.

Seven negroes were caught when Patrolmen McDonald, Barnes and J. Francis raided an alleged gambling house on North Pittsburgh street late Saturday evening. One of the other negroes paid a fine of $25.00, all the rest being sentenced to two days' street work each.

DUNBAR TOWNSHIP WINS

North Union Goes Down to Defeat by Score of 18 to 6.

North Union Township High School was defeated by Dunbar Township High School at Sunbury on Saturday by the score of 18 to 6. Moore made North Union's only score by intercepting a forward pass on the 55 yard line and running to within four yards of the goal, from which point Bell and Moore carried it over on line plunges.

Dunbar township scored two touchdowns in the first quarter and another at the beginning of the second half. The team played a great game, the line especially being a stone wall against the North Union rushes.

WILL ELECTRIFY PART OF W. MD.

Will Handle Traffic Over Blue Ridge Mountains With Electric Motors. Other Improvements Planned.

The Western Maryland Railroad Company is planning to undertake an extensive scheme of improvements in order to enable it to handle traffic on a larger scale and at reduced operating expense, which is already low for a road of its character and location. Application has been made to the Public Service Commission of Maryland for approval of 60 promissory notes of $118,134, a total of $7,088,040, at 6%.

The sale of the notes will be devoted to the extension of the automatic block system on the road. This improvement is one of the many under way and contemplated by the management of the railroad company. The main line of the road is now being double tracked at some points. At other points similar work will be done in the near future. Within a few years the road will be double tracked from Baltimore to Connellsville, where connects with the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie.

The most important improvement contemplated is the installation of electric motors for hauling trains over the Blue Ridge mountains. This problem has been the most difficult encountered by President Carl R. Gray in his task of transforming the Western Maryland into a railroad capable of hauling coal and other heavy traffic economically and efficiently. He is convinced that the problem will be satisfactorily solved through the use of electric motors for mountain climbing.

By the removal of this obstacle the contemplated tunnels under Blue Ridge Summit, or under South Mountain, have been abandoned. At one time it was proposed to extend the road in a straight line from Glyndon to Frederick and thence under Braddock Heights across Middletown Valley, under South Mountain to Hagerstown. The project was so expensive as to be almost prohibited.

W. MARYLAND COAL TRAFFIC

Is Booming Business all Along the Line; Tonnage Increasing.

That the products of the mines constitute a large and important portion of the total traffic of the Western Maryland Railway Company is evidenced by the tonnage statement covering the fiscal year which ended June 30 last. Coal and other mining products were transported over the lines of the company to the extent of 10,263,701 tons, as compared with 8,862,230 tons for the previous fiscal year, an increase of 1,401,471 tons. Bituminous coal traffic totaled 8,810,691 tons, as against 7,412,492 tons for the previous 12 months. Anthracite coal shipments amounted to 360,358 tons, as compared with 318,066 tons for the year before, while coke traffic is placed at 391,901 tons, as against 269,047 tons for the previous 12 months.

The ore tonnage for the 12 months was 113,167 tons, as against 70,563 tons for 1914-1915.

SCHOOLS AND NEWSPAPERS.

The test applied to the pupils of the Mount Pleasant High School of their familiarity with current events, such as is gained from reading newspapers and magazines, developed some interesting facts. It was shown to be a marked deficiency in knowledge upon these subjects, in which respect the pupils of this school have made no worse, and possibly no better, showing than the pupils of any other average high school in the state.

That they lack such knowledge is not due to ignorance, but because our school authorities have never given proper recognition to the necessity and value of instruction along these lines. In the absence of such instruction and without systematic effort to direct their minds or thoughts along these lines of information on every day topics, school children have never felt the incentive, nor have they been moved by an inclination to give attention to them.

Educators of a certain type, which happily are adapting themselves intelligently to the needs of the times, have not always adequately introduced into the work of the schools of those things which their conservatism has devalued. The progress of our schools in the direction of better equipping both the graduates and the undergraduates for the actual problems and duties of life, and a more intimate acquaintance with things about them, has been less rapid than the advocates of more practical courses of study have wished. The tendencies are in that direction, however, and instruction upon matters of every day happenings and progress in history, economics and industry will form a useful part.

How, why and where things are being done today is most likely to indicate the how, the why and often where things will be done tomorrow. No better preparation can be made than by keeping abreast of the times through newspaper and magazine reading and study. This ought to form a part of the daily education of every citizen. It will be no mistake to begin it in the public schools.

WORK TO THE MENACERS!

On the whole people have become dazed almost to stupefaction by the frequent and large advances of the prices of all articles of human need. They are forced, however, to accept the situation as one of the graces of the benign influence of an Administration solemnly committed to a reduction in the High Cost of Living. It is only when the pinch is felt from a new quarter that courage is revived to that point where feeble but futile resistance is offered. When the deprivation of some time-honored right, privilege or custom is threatened, even are disposed to calmly submit, even in the name of a benevolent and much vaunted Democratic Prosperity which has transformed the necessities of the poor into the luxuries of the rich.

When, therefore, a church organization of Conneltsville was obliged to forego its annual turkey supper, neither wonder nor surprise it to be exhibited when the incident attracted so much attention beyond the limits of the city that the Pittsburgh Gazette Times was moved to comment upon it in these words:

The high cost of living is causing an upset in the Conneltsville. In Conneltsville they have had to call off the annual turkey supper in the Methodist Church because the ladies have been so strikingly failed to day after day, your after year, through the calamities of newspaper readers and hard workers for the poor's salary as they are, the ladies could not pay for a 50-cent turkey supper with the birds at 32 cents, dearest.

For once, a very heavy rain fell here, have been chased when they come home from work and find the house dark and their wives, you know, the ladies, are waiting for them, and by the time they have changed their clothes and lumbered about in the state of destitution, their indignation usually has reached such a pitch that nothing short of a Delian's feast will restore them to good humor and put them in a bidding mood for the cake auction. A hungry man who has paid his 50 cents at the door and arrives at the table after many delays due to the severity of places, will often consume two or three dollars' worth of food, and think nothing of it, acquiring a pleasant glow in the process, partly due to the action of the food, and partly to the church, in the good old days there may have been a slight margin of profit in feeding the hungry, but now it is a loss in a bidding mood for the cake auction. A hungry man who has paid his 50 cents at the door and arrives at the table after many delays due to the severity of places, will often consume two or three dollars' worth of food, and think nothing of it, acquiring a pleasant glow in the process, partly due to the action of the food, and partly to the church, in the good old days there may have been a slight margin of profit in feeding the hungry, but now it is a loss in a bidding mood for the cake auction.

This situation brought about by War Prosperity is a menace to our institutions. Woo to the menacers!

The boys keep coming over and the Democratic keep coming over. Dr. J. J. Kreider, Progressive chairman of Dauphin county, and two other leading Progressives of Harrisburg, and at whom Vance McCormick claimed as Wilson supporters, are working hard for Hughes. Dr. Kreider, a former Democratic member of the General Assembly from Fayette, unable to longer follow the leadership of Webb in Washington, has become one of the most forceful and effective campaigners for Hughes now taking part in the Big Drive that will make Fayette the banner Republican county of the state.

A persuasive and glib-tongued agent has been selling a device to electric light consumers in Ansonia which it was claimed would greatly retard the speed of their meters and reduce their monthly bills accordingly. The glib-tongued customer paid $17.50 for the attachment, only to find that it consisted in slowing the meter down it operated at speed it up. Just the usual but never-lamented fate of those who think that "anything to beat the company" pays.

President Wilson is reported to have smiled when passing the Hughes High School in Cincinnati during a parade in that city yesterday. Beginning early to adjust his features to properly fit into the background in Washington when the Hughes inaugural parade passes next March.

HENRY P. SNYDER

Tributes to His Worth and Services by Brother Editors and Others.

The Conneltsville News:

It is with very sincere regret that The News announces the death of Henry Provance Snyder, for so many years the editor of the Conneltsville Courier. The end came early this morning at his home, as he was about to retire, at his office, the work he has carried on with such marked success for so many years. Moments of suffering had not dulled his energy nor taken from him that enthusiasm for the work he had loved to do. It has long been a matter of wonder and surprise to his associates how Mr. Snyder, apparently struggling with the ravages of an indomitable enemy, and he continued to press onward with courage and energy when others would have long since given up the fight.

Mr. Snyder was of the very best and shrewd of Conneltsville. He had grown up in Conneltsville, was a native of a newspaper that had come to be recognized as a part of the city's business life. He had fought for municipal advancement and he had fought, what he had continued to be a municipal official, of his long association in the local news field he was perhaps in closer touch with the civic, business and political life of Conneltsville than any other man here.

Mr. Snyder, having taken such an active part in public affairs, of necessity had many enemies, but these he did make sprang from the things which he fought because he thought they were wrong. He had his enemies, but they were good for the city and what was bad, and he lived closely to his well-organized program as an editor of a smaller-city newspaper he had few equals and no superiors in the state.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feed young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—blisters look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 50c per box. All druggists.

WOMEN IN CONSTANT PAIN FROM BURNS

Most housewives are seldom without a burn or two on hand or wrist—always painful, sometimes disgusting. In spite of the frequency of burns, few housewives are really prepared for them, and continue to rely on ineffectual treatments such as flour, sweet oil, and the like—which never prevent pain and continued annoyance.

The most economical, soothing and effective treatment for burns is to apply Hyclorite promptly. The surface should then be covered so as to protect it from the air and the bandage kept saturated with Hyclorite.

Hyclorite will promptly allay the pain, will cause rapid healing will prevent disfiguring and painful scars. With every bottle are directions for use in treating cuts and wounds, sore throat, and similar evils—for Hyclorite is a most economical and efficient family antiseptic. Hyclorite is a solution of sodium hypochlorite. A U. S. Government report has been published showing that 130 antiseptics were recently tested in military hospitals of Europe and sodium hypochlorite is declared by the surgeons to be the most economical and effective antiseptic of them all.

Although many times more powerful than the harmful antiseptics which contain poison, acid, mercury, and dangerous preservatives, Hyclorite is even safer than the weak and ineffective peroxides. It is clean and harmless as water—so powerful. Any druggist can supply Hyclorite in 25 and 50 cent bottles. General Laboratories, Madison, Wisconsin.

PRESIDENTIAL POINTERS

There were remarkable coincidences in the lives of Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis. Both were born in Kentucky, Lincoln in 1809, Davis in 1808. Both removed from their native state in childhood, Lincoln to the northwest, Davis to the south. Lincoln was a captain of volunteers and Davis a second lieutenant of regulars in the Black Hawk war in 1832. They began their political careers the same year, 1844, Lincoln being a presidential elector for Clay, and Davis an elector for Polk. They were elected to congress about the same time, 1846 and 1846. They were called to preside over their respective governments the same year, Davis in February 8, 1861, Lincoln on March 4, 1861.

FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE SCORES WILSON FOR BREACH OF PLATFORM PLEDGE

to test the safety appliances and, that beneficent law passed by the Republican party to lessen the hazards of railroading. The United States court of Appeals in California declared the law unconstitutional. The brotherhood asked me to appeal the case to the Supreme Court. There was no precedent for such an appeal, but I presented the petition for the right to intervene, which was granted. The law was upheld by the highest court. Later, in order that the appeal in such cases should not be left to the discretion of the court, I later, as a senator, introduced and had passed, an amendment to the law giving the Attorney General the power to so intervene.

What is the Adamson law? Its title speaks it out in its own forefront. It is a law to establish an eight-hour day for employees engaged in actual train service and "for other purposes." There isn't any question about the other purposes, none whatever. Those purposes will come to have any interest for their fathers and mothers after the seventh day of next November. Then it will be an eight-hour day. (Cries of "No, No.") If it doesn't, then someone is trying to deceive the people; to insult their intelligence and reasoning power. You are being treated as a schoolmaster treats his pupils when he demands that whatever he says be accepted as he says it. This law says that for a period of time, which you can readily compute will not exceed nine months and 30 days, the men actually employed on trains shall receive 10 hours' pay for eight hours' work. It doesn't say in the same language, but it does say in effect, that a man on an mileage basis now working five hours and getting eight hours' pay, will be reduced to five-eighths of his pay. If that law had been amended by half a dozen words it could have included all of the railroad employees, the telegraphers, the yardmen, the tens of thousands of men engaged in other capacities by the railroads.

This law is designed to vest in the Congress of the United States the right to say for how long and for what wage a man must work. It strikes at the very root of personal liberty. It defies the very purpose of the labor union. I told that in 1912 the American Federation of Labor passed a resolution taking the stand that it would never stand for any legislation for fixing wages and hours. This ought to be true. What have been fought for less against upon the liberties of the people? What is the difference between being a slave of a Congress and the slave of a master? What more can a master than say how that one must work, and at what price? God forbid that the time has come when American labor has except from its own right to make it conditions.

It was exploited that the President signed the Adamson law with four pennies. There is another law which he signed. He signed it, he said, with emotion. I can imagine what was in his mind at the time. I've put one more over on the American people. He can't fool anyone, much less the people of Pennsylvania. We know what a child labor law is. We passed one two years ago. It says that an employer cannot hire children under a certain age. If he does, he is fined or imprisoned. The law goes further, it says children must be employed under sanitary conditions and they must have a certain amount of education. Won't you be amazed when I tell you there is not a stable in the Democratic Child Labor law prohibiting the employment of children under a certain age? Why, under this law you could run your factory with infants, were that possible, and there is not a suggestion in the law that you could be prosecuted for it. The only thing the law says is that a firm which employs children under a certain age cannot ship its goods if such employment has been within 30 days of the time of shipment. In other words, the factory could work 11 months in the year, close down for a month, and then ship out all its products.

Is it possible that the American people are so dense that even with this kind of intelligence which comes to two and two make four are unable to see the real reason bills of the nature of these are passed a few weeks prior to a general election?

Chairman W. E. Crow then introduced Colonel Thomas S. Crago, former congressman from this district, and now a member at large and candidate for reelection. Mr. Crago said: I want to say that I am not surprised at the legislation passed by the administration. I am surprised that with the tools at hand, it was able to do anything. I am going to speak very briefly, taking up only a few points. I refer particularly to that "little bill" which we are promised.

The administration has been in power for the last three years. Does anyone know the result of the many notes which have been written? Can anyone tell what has been done? Has there been any "little publicity" as to the loss of American lives and property? Does anyone know why the embargo was lifted on the shipment of arms to Mexico? That embargo was imposed by President Taft, who sought to thus end the carnival of bloodshed which had torn the country to the south of us. A trainload of munitions was held up on the border soon after President Wilson took office. Those on board were arrested. A classmate of President Wilson at Princeton, who had contributed to his campaign fund, visited the White House. This man is one of the largest stockholders in a concern which manufactures munitions of war. Do you know that soon after this visit the men were released and the embargo was lifted, permitting the arms to go into that country to later be used against our own soldiers? Do you know that every American correspondent with the troops in Mexico is under bond of $1,000 and in addition has $1,000 in cash on deposit to guarantee that not a word he writes shall be sent out until it has been censored by a censor appointed by Washington? Is this little publicity?

They say Wilson has kept us out of war. What war? The war we have been engaged in is one of our own making down in Mexico. Today our men and boys could not be down on the border if we hadn't meddled in Mexican affairs.

Those heroes of the Revolutionary war under Washington, who fought and gave us liberty, and compared with the battles of Mexico. Are, tell the school children there was no Bunker Hill; tell France the sent Lafayette to fight with a band of cutthroats. Shall we? I say, No. I believe there is enough of the Spirit of '76 left to resent such insults and to refuse an administration which has not men who give value to such sentiments.

Charles A. Snyder's speech was different from that of any of the other speakers. He departed from the campaign issues long enough to tell some amusing anecdotes which drove home the arguments he was making. Mr. Snyder declared that there is no Democratic party in this campaign, that it is all Wilson.

"They don't say, 'Thank God for the Democratic party,'" he said, "but 'Thank God for Wilson.' They say that Wilson has made us prosperous. Well, Spain, the poorest nation on the globe for centuries, is prosperous

So are Norway and Sweden. They never were so prosperous, but I don't read that Wilson did it."

Snyder criticized the farm loan bill, declaring that before a farmer can get any money under its provisions he must get 10 men to go security for him. In addition to putting up his farm, he also declared that Secretary of War Baker proposed to Congress that the American flags used by the government be purchased from a British firm because that concern bid 1/4 cents a flag cheaper. He declared that the deal was blocked only because Congressman Fitzgerald, chairman of the appropriations committee of the House, is an Irishman, who roundly denounced the war secretary for suggesting such a thing.

The closing speech was by Congressman Hopwood. Mr. Hopwood declared that all Somerset is ailing with Republican enthusiasm, while Democratic Greens will poll an unusually large vote for Hughes. He spoke briefly, because of the late hour, although there had been very little restlessness apparent in the audience, virtually all of whom remained until the last speech was uttered.

The Quarterbreed

ROBERT
BENNETT

The twilight was fast fading. Still Hardy waited for a message by cliff and the rocks on either side. It was time for the police to come creeping around on the flank of the assassin. A little more and the dusk would render these shooting difficult. Yet the precious moments slipped by, and no sign of the police.

Over on the far side of the cliff there was a faint glint of metal in the deepening shadow. Without a moment's hesitation Hardy aimed and fired. The bullet found its mark. Hardy leaped to the foot and dashed the mountain side, keeping behind shelter where it was available, but in places boldly rushing up over open spaces.

There, on the spot where he had seen the glint, he found a trace of blood. The wounded man had crept away up the cliff. For several yards Hardy followed the trail by the splashes of crimson on the leaves and rocks. Then the traces ceased. But over in one of the many crevices on the far side of the gap he thought he saw something move among the boulders. He sprang down the slope across the gap, his face flushed with exertion, but his eyes still cold and hard.

Among the heaps of broken rocks in the bottom of the gap Hardy lost sight of the cliff for which he was heading. When he started to return along what he supposed to be the passage by which he had entered, he soon found himself in a cul-de-sac. Dusk was now deepening into night. He came out and into a steep ascent between overhanging ledges. This certainly was not the way by which he had entered, but he kept on, it being easier to escape out of the maze.

Night had fallen when at last he reached the top of the cliff and clambered up on a ridge crest. But the sky was clear, and the starlight enabled him to see the outlines of the mountains that cut out the skyline. A star lower down than any of the others caught his eye. He peered at it fixedly. The little twinkling point of light was not a star—it was a fire, two or three miles away across the intervening valley. Hardy took his bearings by the stars and started down the mountain side directly toward the fire.

Once clear of the rocks of the shattered mountain top he found the going unexpectedly easy. Almost from the first he had lost sight of the fire and at no time did he see any trace of the trail to the mine. On to the left he heard the distant roar of a mountain rill dashing down a ravine to join the main stream in the valley.

At last he came up over the edge of the ridge top, or terrace, on which the fire shined. The moment his eyes cleared the low underbrush below the few scattered pines he perceived the flicker of the fire for which he was looking. He could make out the appearance of the dark forms around the fire, but their number and the light they cast were so dim that he could not tell whether they were Indians or not. He told him that he had not found the camp of his party.

He had no more than made this discovery when a number of yelling, snarling mongrel dogs rushed out at him like a pack of wolves, and he heard their attack by swinging his rifle barrel around in a circle. The cowardly curs closed about him, but were afraid to leap in within reach of the club. He had not stopped his advance. Nor did he pause or hesitate when over the heads of the snarling pack he saw the Indian women and children scurry to the trees and the bushes spring up with their bows and guns.

CHAPTER XI.

Light in the Darkness.
Soon Hardy had approached into the circle of the firelight. Some of the Indians started to aim their weapons at him. He held up his right hand, palm forward. A deep voice called out a guttural order. The threatening backs drew apart to right and left and

He Faced Them as Coolly and Quietly as if They Were His Own Party.

A naked boy ran forward with a blazing stick to drive off the dogs. Hardy calmly advanced to the fire between the grim and stoic bucks. There was not a name then who was not itching to drive a bullet or an arrow through his body, and he knew it. Yet he faced them as coolly and quietly as if they were his own party.

The bucks looked toward the far side of the fire, as if for the signal to strike down the audacious intruder. Hardy followed their glances and perceived a blanket-wrapped Indian who sat in the midst of the volcanic bush seemingly as placid and immobile as a Buddha. His face was down-bent, and so muffled in the blanket that Hardy could not make out the features.

It was, however, easy to divine that the man was the chief of the band.

Hardy walked around the fire with his most dignified bearing, sat down beside the chief and laid his rifle on the ground between them. He then folded his arms and waited, his eyes fixed on the fire in a calm, unwavering gaze. There followed a silence of a full minute's duration. He knew that it might end at any moment in an attack. His hand gripped the hilt of his pistol on his breast under the edge of his coat. The bucks stealthily shifted their positions until they had completely surrounded the unwelcome visitor. Hardy sat motionless and gave no sign that he observed them.

At last, when the suspense had become almost unbearable, the chief muttered a word to the nearest buck. The man glided back toward the largest topee. The chief pushed the blanket from his head. Hardy slowly looked aside at him and perceived the powerful profile of Ti-ova-konza, the Thunderbolt. He was to deal with the head chief of the tribe.

There followed another silence. It was broken by the tread of light feet, and a girl appeared beside the chief. Hardy caught a glimpse of a glancing smile, and glanced quickly up at the face of the girl. She was met by the frightened gaze of Olanna Redoubt. "Oh!" she murmured. "It is bad! You oughtn't to come here, sir. They don't like you. Mr. Van said he was going to tell you—"

A grunt of disapproval from Ti-ova-konza cut short the hurried statement. After a dignified silence the chief spoke to the girl. She clasped her hands and interpreted in an anxious murmur:

"He says I must be only the tongue between you and him. He says, why did you let him? Why have you not gone away, as you said you would?" Hardy turned and looked directly into the haughty face of the chief. "Tell him I did not let him. I did not say I would go away. I wished to stay and prove myself the friend of the tribe. Your brother told me to keep the chiefs from destroying the tribe by attacking me."

Olanna's interpretation brought guttural exclamations from the surrounding bucks. Hardy was equally unmoved by their ferocious glances and contemptuous rejoinders of Ti-ova-konza.

"Does the chief of the Longknives think to destroy a tribe single-handed?" "No, nor do I wish others to destroy the tribe," answered Hardy. "I do not wish the Longknives to come and make war on the tribe. Yet that is what they will do if I am harmed."

Again Olanna interpreted in her staccato tones. This time the chief considered before speaking. Olanna's gold-tipped skin quivered and quivered.

"He says he will fight if you do not promise to go away," she gasped. Hardy smiled. "Have no fear, Olanna. He is too great a chief to kill a guest in his camp. Tell him I came to the reservation to be a friend to the tribe. (Though I am a chief of the Longknives, my heart is good toward his people. It would be foolish of him to kill or drive away the friend of his people.)"

This time Ti-ova-konza gave the interpreter an opportunity of contempt. The surrounding bucks glared more ferociously than ever.

"He says you are fork-tongued," Olanna translated the reply. "He says, if you are a friend, why did you say at the council that you would punish all the tribe for the killing of Nogen?" "That is a mistake. I did not say I would punish the tribe."

Olanna interpreted the answer and the grim old chief's rejoinder: "The Longknife's mouth was big at the agency. Here he is alone in my camp and his mouth is small."

"I talk as I talked at the agency," Whitt Ti-ova-konza chimed in said about punishing the tribe for the truth. There must have been a mistake in the interpretation, or the chiefs did not hear aright. I had only peace and fellowship in my heart. I said that I did not blame the killing of Mr. Nogen on the tribe."

This statement failed to break Thunderbolt's mask of stolidity, though some of the other Indians slightly relaxed their menacing attitudes. Hardy took off his hat to show the red scar above his temple, and spoke again:

"I do not blame the killing of Mr. Nogen on the tribe; nor do I blame the tribe for the wrongdoing of the Indians. In the head five days ago. The same man, or another man with a bad heart, tried to shoot me, after sundown today, as I came up the trail over on the other side of the broken-topped mountain."

Olanna's interpretation was met by a guttural "Huh!" of surprise even from the chief. He asked shrewdly: "If the Longknife does not lie, is he not afraid to be in my camp? It is the nearest to the trail."

Hardy smiled and held out his open palm to the chief. "I trust Ti-ova-konza and his people. There is only one Indian, and even he may come to feel good in his heart toward me when he learns that I am the friend of the tribe."

Still the old chief's face remained inscrutably motionless. He pondered, and then he spoke in a low voice: "The Longknife claims that he is a friend. Why, then, did he say at the council that he will do the way Nogen did and make my people dig stones and dirt from the big holes, without giving them any trade goods for their work?"

Hardy's clear eyes dimmed for a moment, and then sparkled with comprehension. He answered with an earnest sincerity of tone that completely belated:

"I now see that at the council meeting I mistook much of what I told him to say, or else, in his anger, Ti-ova-konza and his subchiefs failed to understand what he intended to say. The place where stones are dug is on Indian ground. It belongs to the tribe. No white man has any right to make your people dig stones. If they are willing to dig, they must be given trade goods for their work."

The response to his statement was unmistakable. The moment that Olanna had interpreted it the last trace of menace disappeared from the bearing of the Indians, and even the chief began to relax. Yet he had still another query:

"Did the Longknife say he would stop the issue to the tribe of all government goods and that he would take away from the tribe all their lands and give them to the white men?"

At last the real cause of the failure of the council was disclosed. Either intentionally or through stupid blindness Redoubt had misinterpreted the chief's words by a twisted interpretation that had given the exact reverse of what had been intended. With the key to the situation in his hands, Hardy at once began to make clear what he had tried to tell at the council. He explained why the issue of goods would cease the following spring, and what was meant by an allotting of tribal land in severity. He added that if there was gold on any of the reservation land it would be well for the tribe to sell that part of the land for the mineral and for the white men would, sooner or later, come in and steal it.

More than half convinced of Hardy's sincerity, though with still a lingering suspicion, Ti-ova-konza explained in turn that the tribe was not only willing to allot the farming land of the reservation and sell the mineral land, but a treaty to that effect had been agreed upon by the tribe, the previous year. All that remained to be done was for the white chiefs at Washington to agree on the price to be paid for the mineral land and for a delegation of tribal chiefs to go to Washington and put their marks on the treaty paper.

A question or two from Hardy brought out the angry complaint that when Nogen began to dig stones he told the chiefs there would be no holes. But Nogen would not allow it. Then a bad Indian had shot Nogen, and Van had shot the killer. The tribe did not blame Chief Van. But they had felt bad toward Nogen and they had felt bad toward the new agent because they thought he was the one who had done. Now they would like the new agent. No Indian would wish to kill him when it became known what he intended to do for the tribe.

After the old chief finished his explanation, Hardy found himself a well-cared and honored guest in the camp. At his suggestion Ti-ova-konza readily agreed to hold out runners in the morning to call a council at the mine the day after. Hardy, in turn, promised to draw up papers to make smooth the way of the delegation of chiefs in Washington.

At a sign from her grandfather, Olanna now brought food to the guest. While he ate he talked with her about her experience in the camp. She told him joyfully that her mother's father had said that her mother had been very kind to her and had been hospitable, though not so kind, to her brother.

But when Hardy casually inquired whether Redoubt had left the camp at the same time as Vandervyn, the girl's flow of conversation had been abruptly stopped. She blushed and stammered and became so painfully shy and confused that Hardy considerably relaxed his drowsiness.

CHAPTER XII.

His Duty.
At dawn Hardy was roused by Ti-ova-konza with a greeting as friendly as it was dignified, though Hardy had to surmise its meaning from the chief's expression. Olanna was already out side, helping with breakfast. While she served her grandfather and the guest, Hardy suggested that she go with him to the mine, where they probably would find Marie and the rest of the party. Reluctant as was Ti-ova-konza to part with his half-white granddaughter, he consented her to go, but only a mile away across the mountain, he declined the offer of a suddenless mount, took ceremonial leave of the old chief and set out up the mountain side with the girl and a young Indian guide.

Hardy noted the bearings and distances of all prominent points around him with the eye of one well trained in the art of topography. A quarter-hour brought the little party to the top of the low mountain. Before them the far side of the mountain pitched down a steep and rocky incline into a narrow valley. The silent Indian guide pointed to a terrace midway down the descent. From amidst the pines was rising a cloud of blue-black smoke.

Soon Olanna pointed out a cabin among the pines. They were within fifty yards of it when Vandervyn and Dupont came out of a hole in the cliff and of a spur-ridge near the cabin, and stood staring at the newcomers in undisguised astonishment. Hardy swore and hastened toward them, his eyes bright and cold. The two men glanced at one another and advanced to meet him halfway.

Dupont was the first to speak: "By Gar, Crip, we sure are mighty glad to see you again! All safe and sound! Thought you'd gone and lost yourself on that cursed mountain. The piece of rock that you were looking for, sir?" "And you two here, I see," dryly rejoined Hardy.

"I beg your pardon, Captain Hardy," replied Vandervyn, his eyes flashing with quick anger. "You told me to go ahead and guard Marie."

"I added for you to send the police around to look this up to see what had become of me," returned Hardy.

Dupont hastened to interpose: "Mr. Van got the idea you meant us to rush Marie through here to the mine, where she'd be safe. So we lit out fast as we could. The piece found your mine, but lost your trail up in the rocks. First thing this morning we sent the whole bunch back to trail you."

The honest bluntness of Dupont's tone and his straightforward statement compelled belief. Hardy nodded. "Very well. I could not expect that either of you would trouble to go back for me."

"Just the same, we would've, Cap, you can bet your life on it—only on account of Marie and—"

"In common decency you might have returned to see what had become of me."

Hardy was sure. So we lit out fast as we could. The piece found your mine, but lost your trail up in the rocks. First thing this morning we sent the whole bunch back to trail you."

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Wise marketing is the key to successful farming. This sums up the experience of J. J. Budlong, a Chicago man who has grown wealthy in agriculture. Mr. Budlong for many years has farmed several hundred acres of land and produces vegetables almost exclusively. The Budlong tract, farm is the greatest of its kind in the middle west and in some respects the greatest in the world. A pickle factory owned by this successful farmer handles a large part of the edibles raised on the premises. Table commodities are shipped by Mr. Budlong to every part of America and to several of the big markets in other continents.

Practically all the outdoors and cucumbers raised on this place are put up in pickles, and by this means they do not have to be marketed in any hurry or at any particular time. There are many other commodities which work into the scheme of canning and pickling. For instance, the cabbage crop goes well when turned into sauerkraut, and beans and peas pay best when canned. It is always best to produce a variety of staple products, so that if one or two of them are low in price the others are quite likely to pull up the average up to a profitable basis. This is a common experience in all kinds of farming. Sometimes wheat is low, but corn is high, and the farmer can make up for the loss in wheat by the gain in corn. The same principle applies to all kinds of farming. The farmer should always have a variety of crops, so that if one crop is low, the others will make up for it.

For Dipping Hogs.
This is the cement constructed box dipping vat recommended by the Wisconsin experiment station. It has a chute at either end, and there is a return drain apron at the end where the hogs come up out of the dip. By holding ing them on this incline for a few minutes a great deal of the dip is saved by running off them and into the tank. The vat proper is sixteen inches wide at the bottom, twenty-four inches wide at the top and four feet deep. It is ten feet long.

Weeds Use Water.
A large weed may use as much as a barrel of water. A plant weighing one pound when dried has used up 700 pounds of water in making its growth or seventy to eighty gallons making nearly two barrels. From this it is plain that cutting down weeds is a very good way of saving moisture for the crop.

or corn will pay enormously, but if raised as exclusive money crops there will be years of total failure. Thousands of industrious farmers have been ruined by sticking to the single crop idea on farms too large for their equipment and capital.

Canning, preserving and pickling enable any farm family to double the price which it would otherwise obtain for such things as sweet corn, peas, cucumbers, onions, peppers, berries, currants, plums, cherries and a dozen similar commodities. This plan enables one to charge full retail prices and so make the farm return high profits.

Nearly all farmers know how to produce crops, but few of them are skillful at selling. This is the main difference between the Budlong success and the many failures which have been recorded. Mr. Budlong himself says that, as a general thing, he does not get better crops than other people. The secret of his success is not in the average Cook county soil, but he buys manure, carloads of manure from the city and keeps the ground in a fine state of fertility. The fertilizer is plowed in every fall. Sometimes he has great crops, like peas, say beans or clover, to work into the soil in the fall. There is a scientific reason for plowing in this way, especially the plowing in of an abundance of stable and farm manure, but without pretensions of scientific attainments here is all farmers know how to keep up

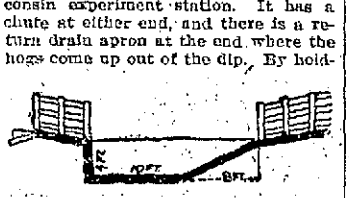

SOIL FOR ANALYSIS.

Sample Sent to Experiment Station Often Do Not Show Real Conditions.

A very common mistake in sending samples to the experiment station for analysis is to select samples that do not represent the true conditions, say better farming. For example, a sample might be taken from soil near trees where cattle rest, and this material would show far more nitrogen than the rest of the field. The sample should represent the average soil. Dig up the soil with a spade to a depth of eight inches and take a handful from the top, middle and bottom of the spade and be careful to clean the spade thoroughly each time it is used. Take at least a half dozen samples. Put these into a pail or bucket, then mix them up and send about a pound of this mixture to the experiment station, where it will be analyzed. Samples should not be sent, however, without first having an engagement to have the work done, as the stations are able to do only a limited amount of work of this kind.

When one remembers that only about half an ounce of soil is finally analyzed it will be seen that thorough mixing is very necessary. Do not mix different soils. For example, if there is an alluvial and an upland soil do not send a complete sample of both, but gather the composite samples separately.

Old Boiler Stoppings.
Old boilers can be found in most every junk yard and can be obtained at a very reasonable price. One farmer bought an old boiler of a nearby city council, transported it to his farm and set it up on a concrete base. He uses

It for a water supply tank, which gives him water under pressure in all departments of the farm.

He took all the old tubes out of the old boiler and sold them for junk, which paid him for hauling the outfit to his farm. The old boiler was given a coat of asphalt paint inside and out. During the cold winter months this warmer prevents the water from freezing by packing straw around it. Farm Progress.

Examine Your TEETH Tonight

—after you clean them.

You will find, in all probability, an accumulation of tartar on the enamel and bits of food deposit hiding between the crevices. YOUR DENTIFRICE does not FULLY CLEAN! Loss of teeth is caused usually by one of two conditions—Pyorrhea or decay, both of which develop, as a rule, only in the mouth where germ-laden tartar is present.

SENRECO, the recently discovered formula of a dental specialist, is two-fold in its action. First, it REALLY CLEANS, embodying specially prepared, soluble granules unusually effective in cleaning away food deposits. Second, it is particularly destructive to the germ of Pyorrhea. Yet it is perfectly safe, containing neither injurious chemicals nor hard grit.

LOCALS TROUNCE WAYNESBURG HIGH BY SCORE OF 48-0

Connellsville Boys Completely Overwhelm Greene Countyans.

CAPTAIN DUGGAN SHINES AGAIN

Scores Four Touchdowns and Kicks Six Goals Out of Seven Attempts; Darr and Miller Make Spectacular Runs; Visitors Are Outclassed.

Connellsville High School easily defeated Waynesburg High School at Fayette Field Saturday by the score of 48-0, in a listless game featured only by a few spectacular long runs. Connellsville outclassed the visitors. The goal line of the locals was never in danger, and the game was played almost entirely in Waynesburg's territory.

Connellsville never lost the ball on downs, and Loughrey was never forced to punt. Long and consistent gains were made by Captain Duggan, Darr and Miller. Duggan played hard, and his four touchdowns were all well earned. Twice he ran for long distances through broken fields for touchdowns.

The first score was made early in the game, when Martray took the ball over on an end-around-end run. Loughrey punted out to Carson, and Duggan kicked the goal. In the second quarter Duggan ran 29 yards for a touchdown and kicked the goal. Soon after the next lineup McCormick secured the ball for Connellsville by intercepting a forward and Darr carried it over for the third score of the game. Loughrey punted out to Martray and Duggan again booted the pigskin across the goal posts. The half ended with the score 21-0.

The second half saw a number of substitutes in the Connellsville lineup. Receiving Waynesburg's kick, Miller dodged his way along in a brilliant way and returned the ball 25 yards. Darr did his duty by making another long gain and Captain Duggan plunged through for another touchdown. This time Connellsville's leader failed to kick goal. It was his only miss out of seven attempts. Two more touchdowns and the resulting goals were scored by Duggan in quick order, and Ashe had the honor of taking the ball across for the last time. The game ended with the ball in Connellsville's possession, and the local boys untired and going strong.

In the second half Connellsville's batteries had little practice at the open game. A number of forward passes were tried, and one or two succeeded. Quick line shifts were executed nicely, and a few tricks were tried.

The crowd was large, the high school students especially being out in force. The lineup:

Mrs. E. Brannon Handling Jonesboro Team—Makes Good Too.

There is only one college in the country having a woman for full fledged football coach. She is Mrs. E. W. Brannon, wife of the coach of the Jonesboro Agricultural college football team. Mrs. Brannon had been assisting her husband, but this year she is coaching a team of her own. She has full charge of the Aggie prep team and is the sole guide and board of strategy of the eleven.

Here is what her husband says of her. "She broke in as a scout when I sent her to scout some formation of prospective rivals in their early season games. She showed me that she knew 'inside football' as well as any of my assistants."

"Last season she helped to plan our offense and defense for every game

PRESIDENTIAL POINTERS

The salary of the president of the United States was the cause of discussion in the first congress, in view of the fact that the Constitution declared that the president should receive compensation for his services. Washington had notified his fellow citizens that he desired no salary. This limit suggested in congress raised from $15,000 to $70,000. The salary was finally placed at $25,000 and this remained the compensation until President Grant's second term (March 3, 1873), when it was increased to $50,000. Chapter 2513 of the laws of the second session of the fifty-ninth congress, approved March 4, 1907, appropriated "for traveling expenses of the president of the United States, to be expended at his discretion and accounted for by his certificate solely, $25,000." In the second session of the sixtieth congress the matter of increasing the president's salary was again considered, and it was decided that the president's salary be fixed at $75,000 a year.
